Community Development

Expanding economic development opportunities in our communities through innovative programming and research

Community Development

What We Do

Stabilize and Revitalize Communities • Strengthen Community Development Financial Institutions • Support Nonprofit Community Organizations • Build Financial Capability • Track Emerging Issues

Our team of 12 professionals is dedicated to addressing these community development issues across the Fifth Federal Reserve District—Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. We work with a diverse group of community partners to achieve our mission.

As part of the Federal Reserve System, we also work with the Board of Governors and Community Development Departments at the other 11 Reserve Banks to support the economic growth objectives of the Federal Reserve Act by encouraging community investment and fair and impartial access to credit in low- and moderate-income communities.

What We Offer

Our programming offers innovative strategies and solid technical assistance grounded in practical experience, a study of best practices and applied research. We convene relevant local, regional and national forums with our partners.

We also produce a variety of objective and engaging publications:

- 5th District Footprint provides a one-page, spatial analysis of various community development issues in our region.
- MarketWise Community presents an accessible, short description of community development initiatives.
- Community Scope offers a more in-depth analysis of issues and policies.
